Harvey County Oral Health Coalition makes a splash in the local news

This month the Harvey County Oral Health Coalition drew attention to untreated dental decay among the county's children in an article in The Newton Kansan. The article highlighted the findings from recent school oral health screenings conducted in conjunction with the state's Bureau of Oral Health. According to the data from the school screenings, approximately 16% of the children in Harvey County have untreated dental decay. In the article, Harvey County Oral Health Coalition member Maggie Smet, RDH, noted, "The numbers are better than they used to be."

Dental Champions Corner:

Drs. Lisa Metzen (Class 6) and Ashley Swisher (Class 5) were featured in the Kansas Dental Association's new book, "140 Years, 140 Stories." Metzen and Swisher were dental school classmates and now practice together in the north central community of Minneapolis.

Currently the Oral Health Kansas traveling sugary drink displays are on display at the GraceMed, Manhattan Area Technical College, and the United Methodist Mexican-American Ministries' Garden City Dental Clinic.

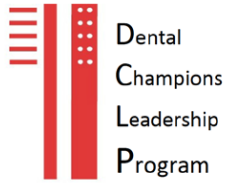

If you are interested in having the drink display on display in your area, send an email to Tanya.

Drink displays are available for hosting in September!

New Pew Report on Access to Dental Services

Also this week, the Pew Charitable Trusts published a new report about the dentist shortages and in several parts of the country. A reference to Kansas is made in the report noting, "In 2010, 53 of 105 counties had two or fewer dentists. All but one of those counties had dentist shortages, and 13 had no dentists at all."

The report also discusses challenges many states face in attracting dentists to become Medicaid providers.
